Happy Birthday!

For a Halloween party, I went as Poison Ivy. (As in the Batman villain.)

What are you going as?

Happy Birthday!

I think Halloween is a WONDERFUL birthday!

I haven't costumed for trick-or-treat in ages, but my granddaughter is going to be the 102nd Dalmation this year.

Happy Birthday!

Well, I'm wearing nothing interesting for work, which is doubly sad because I'm teaching today. (Okay, I really like this hoody, and I've gotten compliments on it, but it's still not a costume.)

Tonight... I've been trying to think of something I have that can be a costume, and that still fits. I don't even have a chef's toque, so I can't put on that, a black unitard, grab my giant spoon and go as my super hero alter ego Magic Chef. I might end up just wearing my competition silks, which would be lame.

(But then, they're awfully pretty, and I haven't been competing or doing demos, so they've been neglected. Of course, I also haven't tried them on for a while. They should be adaptable, but I probably last wore them, oh, forty pounds ago, and they may look a bit like a clown suit.)

Hippo birdie two ewe!

For parties this weekend, I went as a sultry vampire (the Edwardian black jacket I have is incredible, and I looked marvelous with it in a black corset and long skirt). Then I had a soccer game where they said wear costumes but you must wear team color jersey - I went as pippi longstocking. Today at work I am in that long black jacket again, but the PC effect with white shirt, bowtie & slacks is penguin.

I'm going to OWS as a suffragette, with a friend going as Emma Goldman.

A very happy birthday to you!

Happy birthday! My youngest was born three days before Halloween and has never forgiven me for not hanging on to him those three extra days. I keep telling him that he was the one who pulled the plug.

Today I went to work in a pseudo-Victorian gown made of purple Dupioni silk shot with blue. Unfortunately, my collection of accessories wasn't up to pulling off a Steampunk costume, or I would have done so.

Happy birthday! Unfortunately, we don't celebrate Halloween over here, so no trick-or-treating for me.

Belated Happy Birthday/Spooksdays

Thoroughly in the ranks of the boring here, didn't dress up, didn't even have the bell go once.

My daughter went as a witch in black and pink gown and my son went as a pirate. Both wore costumes that they spotted at the thrift store while we were back to school shopping in September! (Us adults hid the costumes so they wouldn't be worn ragged before Hallowe'en.) Neither had enough layers on but we lasted 45 minutes before retreating to warm up and eat the loot. I went as a warm grownup.

Just a little something I thought you might like. I don't think they're geckos, but they're cute.
